

September 2019

PGE appreciates the community's interest in the property and its history. As we shared in our open houses over the summer and online, the conditions of the buildings on the island vary widely. One of the buildings, Mill J, has been unused for decades and presents a serious safety risk.

In October, removal of Mill J will begin to prevent an unplanned collapse. We have no plans to remove Mill J's stone foundation and will protect it during the demolition. We'll then explore long-term options to manage it.

We take environmental and cultural stewardship seriously and have retained a professional to document and photograph the structure for history's sake. We are also working with relevant state agencies to make sure the removal complies with all applicable regulations.

Mill J interior

Mill J roof